Contributors

Kate Davis (University of Southern Queensland)
Kate a Senior Research Fello at USQ's Digital Life Lab. She is a social scientist who researches information experience. Kate is a librarian by trade with a background in public and national libraries. Kate is an experienced facilitator with practical expertise in design-based workshop development and delivery. Find Kate online at katedavis.info or @katiedavis.

Clare Thorpe (University of Southern Queensland)
Clare is the Associate Director (Library quality and Planning) at University of Southern Queensland. She has worked in academic and state libraries since 2001, using evidence-based approaches to develop and apply best practices in collection management, user experiences, staff management, and information literacy design. Clare was awarded the Australia Library and Information Association's Metcalfe Award in 2005 and the Queensland Library Achiever of the Year in 2016. Follow Clare on Twitter @thorpe_clare.

Mark Hangartner (University of Auckland)
Mark is the Subject Librarian for Classics and Ancient History, European Languages and Literature, History, Philosophy, Theological and Religious Studies. Mark is a long term member of ANZTLA, and has presented papers at previous ANZTLA conferences.
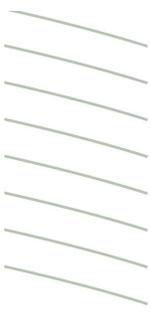

Maria Stanton (American Theological Library Association)
Maria is ATLA's Director of Production and is the contact person for questions about indexing policies and practices, and the ATLA subscription database content.

Mandy Lupton (Queensland University of Technology)
Dr Mandy Lupton is a senior lecturer in the Faculty of Education at the Queensland University of Technology. She is the coordinator of the Master of Education (teacher-librarianship). Mandy's research areas are information literacy, inquiry learning and connected learning. Her current project involves analysing the digital identities of pre-service and practising teachers. She is also working on building a model of the connected educator.

Erin Mollenhauer (Moore College)

Erin began her career in information studies as a cataloguer at Moore College Library in 2012, while completing her Masters in Librarianship through Charles Sturt University. After developing an interest in rare books and archives, Erin obtained a further qualification in archives and record management and was appointed Moore College's archivist and special collections librarian in 2017.